CHAPTER 4

MULTIDECK HEADLINES

A multideck headline is one which consists of two or more independent units given in separate lines one below the other and not separated by a punctuation mark. An independent unit is formally distinguished by its representing the structure of one of the nominal or verbal types of headlines. Each unit of multideck headline is syntactically as well as semantically related to the other. A multideck headline is different from a multiline headline, which is a single unit given in two or more lines for space adjustment. Consider the following examples distinguishing a multideck and a multiline headline.

Multideck headline

1. sheekharge bembala
Shekhar-dat support
buuTa samarthane
Buta justification
'Buta Singh justified the support to Shekhar'

Multiline headline

2. sinimaa TikeT
cinema ticket
keeLi ode tinda
ask-pp get beaten up-pst.rp
kaaleeju vidyaarathi

'the college student who asked for a cinema ticket and got beaten up'

The multideck headline illustrated in example 1 consists of two independent units, that is, two different types of nominal headlines viz., dative noun + noun and subject noun + noun and the first one is an object noun clause of the predicate belonging to the second one as revealed in the following underlying structure:

1a. sheekharge bembala (niiDiddannu)
 Shekhar-dat support give-pst.ger-acc
 ↓
 buuTa samarthane + (isidaru) (=samarthisidaru)
 'Buta Singh justify-pst-3sh'

The multiline headline exemplified in 2 is on the other hand, a single unit representing relative adjectival clause + noun type of nominal headline and its underlying structure is as follows:

2a. (kaaleeju vid yarthi) sinēmaa TikeT
 ↓ i
 college student cinema ticket
 keeLi ode tindanu -kaaleeju vid yarthi
 ↓ i
 tinda
 ask-pp get beaten up-pst-3sm college student

The use of multideck is just one way of separating two or more units of a headline. The punctuation marks like comma, colon, semicolon, dash and dots are also used prevalently for this purpose as illustrated below:

Comma

3. roogi biTTa, kees shiiT hiDida
 patient leave-pst-3sm, case sheet hold-pst-3sm
 '(doctor) left the patient,(but) retained the case sheet'

Colon

4. kaaveeri yoojanegaLu nillavu:
 Cauvery projects stop-fut.neg-3pln
 sacivara spaSTane
 minister-gen clarification
 'Cauvery projects will not be stopped:
 minister's clarification'

Semicolon

5. praaviDeNT fanD
 provident fund
 baDDi haNakke ottaaya;
 interest amount-dat pressure
 satyaagraha bedarike
 satyagraha threat
 'pressure for provident fund interest amount; satyagraha
 threat'

Dash

6. baamb biiti-janaruu eccaravahisali
 bomb fear people-emp take precautions-opt
 'bomb fear-let people also take precautions'

Dots

7. ede haalu uNisi ...maguvaaguvudu
 breast milk feed-imp.pl...get conceived-npst.ger
 tappisi
 stop-imp.pl
 'breast feed... avoid child birth'

It is also found that two independent units are given adjacently in a single line even without a punctuation mark as follows:

8. helmeT tegeda praaNa tetta
 helmet remove-pst-3sm life lose-pst-3sm
 '(someone) removed (did not wear) the helmet and lost his life'
9. obba cuuDaayisida mattobba caccisikoNDA
 one fellow cease-pst-3sm -another fellow get beaten-pst-3sm
 'one fellow teased, another fellow got beaten up'

With the different alternatives available to express two or more units of a headline, multideck is found to be sparingly used in Kannada dailies. Among the attested multideck headlines, doubledeck headlines are predominant and three-deck headlines are rare. The different syntactic and semantic relationships in which multideck headlines are used is discussed in this chapter.

In multideck headlines, the first deck is found to be a casual / postpositional constituent, an adjectival clause, an adverbial clause, or a quotative clause to the second deck.

Multidecker as a vertical arrangement of units is a device used by headline writers when they do not have space-length horizontally. Except this practical factor, there is nothing very special about the multidecker arrangement. Multideck headlines are 'informative' but they are not so 'precise' and 'attractive' as the single-deck headlines (cf. Simon-Vandenberg, 1981:114).
